

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Method and apparatus suitable for use within a television receiver for storing program guide information, wherein user interaction with a graphical object is used to determine the level of program information to be stored and the schedule length for the stored program guide information. User may select to store only basic program information, all extended program information, or a combination of basic program information with a desired degree of extended program information.

[illegible]